DESCRIPTION

Early recognition and treatment of mental illness is important to ensuring health in pregnancy and the postpartum period for a mother, her baby and her family. This OTN mini-series will focus on assessment, diagnosis and treatment of common psychiatric illnesses during the perinatal period. It will include a review of psychotropic medication use in pregnancy and during breastfeeding.

OBJECTIVES

At the end of this presentation, the target audience will be able to:

- Assess and identify mental illnesses in pregnancy and postpartum.
- Recognize importance to mother, baby and family of treating perinatal mental illness.
- Describe pharmacological and psychosocial treatments for perinatal mental illnesses.

AUDIENCE

MDs (Family physicians, psychiatrists, obstetricians), nurse practitioners, midwives and other health professionals interested in perinatal mental health care.
